 East Facing Section of Domestic Refuse Pit
 Extension Drawing of Pit (See A + B)

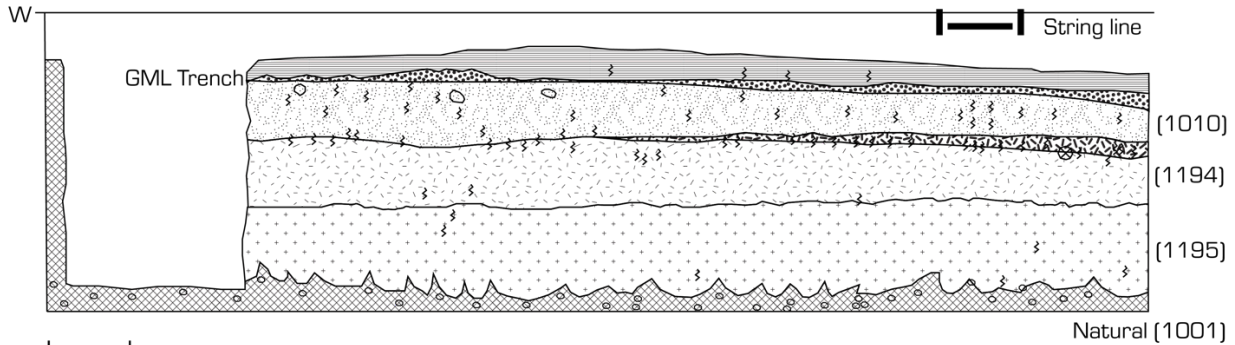

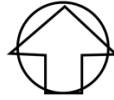

- (1097) = Very loose and friable levelling fill. Clayey sandy silt, brownish/orange with inclusions of introduced gravels and angular and rounded pebbles (40-50%). Transition to (1098) was abrupt in sections and diffuse in others.
- (1098) = Loose to compact sandy silty clay. Light orange with inclusions of fine gravels and small lenses of white/grey coarse drained sand across section. Larger pebbles and quartz gravels (>1-2%). Transition into the natural (1001) is diffused throughout the section.
- (1001) = Strong orange compact to cemented clay base. Inclusions of manganese nodules throughout that increase with depth.
- 1044/ = Cut for domestic refuse pit. Appears to be square and extends to foundations of building CC.
- (1045) = Fill for cut 1044/. Upper section drawing depicts thin lenses of (1098) potentially created/disturbed across surface due to construction of building CC. One third of pit excavated (see section of rubbish pit above). Fill comprised very dark brown sandy silt, loessE to compact with a clay content emerging toward base and increasing with depth. Charcoal staining and inclusions throughout (2-3%). Degraded animal bone (identified as sheep and cow), mold blown glass, gin bottles, salad dressing bottle, ceramic and pottery. Complete bottles and fragmented glass, ceramic, clay pipe stem and bowl circa 1850s-1870s.

Legend:

- Tree root
- Organic, root rich underlay
- Rootlet
- Sorted lens of sand (Sydney sand?)
- River pebbles
- Maganese nodules

Notes:

- (1010) Comprised of an upper layer of silty sand, underlain by a lens of sand above an orange clay. Described as a mixed deposit associated with the Young High School phase. Visually stratified, it is still considered a single context. prevalence of roots.
- (1194) Clear transition to this distinct light tan silty sand is patently obvious. It is a fine to medium grain deposit with firm compaction. Many roots are present in this layer. Thickness varies from 100-180mm around site. Slightly mottled.
- (1195) Grey brown silty sand with a fine to very fine grained matrix. The transition to the natural soil below is diffuse but observable.
- (1001) Orange red clay. Natural base. Very distinct deposit with presence of maganese nodules.
